

Nikki Haley to Announce Presidential Run

Former United Nations Ambassador Nikki Haley speaking with supporters at a campaign event for U.S. Senator Martha McSally at a home in Scottsdale, Arizona.

By Patrick Houck
February 1, 2023

Outlets from across the political spectrum are reporting that Nikki Haley is going to announce she's running for president. It's no longer a question of if but when.

During the Trump administration, Haley served as the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations. Her tenure was widely regarded as a success, even by some of Trump's critics. In 2011, she became South Carolina's first Indian-American and female governor. Haley served as governor for six years before joining the Trump administration.

Charleston, South Carolina's daily newspaper, The Post and Courier, reports a formal announcement by Haley will come on Feb. 15. Reaction from the political class has poured in on Twitter: What do you think about Haley's decision? Will it help or hurt former President Donald Trump? Tell us in the comments below!