

Friend,

The national average price for a gallon of gasoline is now 61% higher than it was this time last year. This news is particularly bleak as we head into the coldest months of the year, and when The Energy Department has already forecasted that heating bills will be up to 54% higher this winter than last as a result of higher energy prices.

Now more than ever, the United States should be focused on energy independence and the benefits that come along with it. Unfortunately, Biden's failed energy policies have reduced our energy independence and domestic energy production while House Democrats are pushing job-killing energy taxes that only exacerbate the rising energy costs for American families.

From the gas pump to heating their house, Americans are feeling the pain of President Biden's anti-energy policies in their wallets. We should be making it easier for American companies to increase domestic oil and gas production and hire more U.S. workers, not rely on OPEC and Russia to increase global output as President Biden has done.

This Administration and Congress must take immediate action to regain American energy independence. President Biden must recognize the very real costs that Americans feel everyday as a result of this worsening energy crisis.

Sincerely,
Rob
