

Friend,

As the holiday season approaches, folks across the country are understandably concerned with the skyrocketing prices we see on everyday household goods. The average American household is paying an additional \$175 a month on food, fuel, and housing because of inflation. Constantly increasing airfare prices are causing many families to question whether or not they can travel to be with loved ones for the holidays. Additionally, the worsening supply chain crisis is leaving shelves across the country bare just ahead of this upcoming busy holiday season.

I want to get your thoughts on this important issue, and hear how you have been impacted by this ongoing issue:

Take My Survey

Are you, or someone you know personally, reconsidering traveling for the holidays due to the increased cost of gasoline, flights, etc.?

I am reconsidering travel due to increased expenses

Someone I know personally is reconsidering travel due to increased expenses

No, I am not reconsidering travel due to increased expenses

Indifferent/ Unsure

Are you concerned about the price of this upcoming Thanksgiving meal?

- Yes, I am concerned
- No, I am not concerned
- Indifferent/ Unsure

Have you personally experienced empty shelves at the store due to the supply chain crisis?

- Yes, I have experienced empty shelves at the store
- No, I have not experienced empty shelves at the store
- Indifferent/ Unsure

Where, if any, have you felt the impact of increasing prices? [Click all that apply]

- Grocery Stores
- Clothing Stores
- Gas Stations
- Heating bills
- Airfare prices
- Other

Sincerely,
Rob

